WARNING FROM the CPSC

The Consumer Product Safety Commission is issuing an urgent warning to parents and caregivers to refrain from using any crib that with a missing, broken or loose part. Make to tighten the crib's hardware from time to time to keep the crib sturdy. When using a drop side crib, parents and caregivers should check to make sure that the drop side or any other moving part operates smoothly. Always check all sides and corners of the crib for parts separating that can create a gap or entrap a child. In addition, do not try to repair any side of the crib. Babies have died in cribs where repairs were attempted by parents and caregivers.

Crib age is an important factor in safety. At a minimum, The Consumer Product Safety Commission recommends that parents and caregivers do not use cribs that are older than 10 years old. New mandatory federal crib rules take effect on June 29, 2011. All cribs manufactured and sold after that date must meet new and improved safety requirements. Older cribs do not meet the new standard and can have a variety of safety problems.

Please remember that buying or accepting cribs second hand can be risky. Second-hand cribs may not come with all of the necessary parts that are needed to make sure your child is safe. Please use caution and be familiar with the new rules established by the CPSC regarding crib safety.
